Preface

The importance of scientific publishing, that has enlightened the path of science and researchers, provided many benefits and services to humanity and those interested; If research is about progress and evolution, scientific publishing is key. Scientific symposiums and conferences are undoubtedly one of the most important means of scientific publishing, which has played a major role in creating a suitable scientific environment, securing distinguished academic meetings and providing distinguished research meetings; The Scientific Research Activists' Caucus; To present their best knowledge and experiences, and to discuss them in the interest of society for a better reality and a bright future. From this point of view comes the idea of the first International Conference of Postgraduate Students in Linguistic and Literary Studies; To present their insights, present their vision, make their scientific projects available for evaluation, as well as provide the opportunity to publish them, and benefit from their professors to guide, modify and evaluate them. On the sidelines of the conference, some scientific workshops will be held to learn about the correct curriculum for scientific research, its mechanism and modern curricula.
